Twenty-five miles of the Insisted that German should be spoken in the Polish part of his empire. There, however, he found the spirit of nationality strong even among the little children, who submitted to public chastisement rather than abandon their native tongue. Doubtess Francis Joseph would not object to the Hungarian soldiers fighting as Hungarians or thinking as Hungarians, and he certainly cannot hope to make Austrians out of them by taking from them the right to receive their orders in the language which they have spoken from infancy.

Although the socialist party in Italy has succeeded in preventing the proposed visit of the czar to Italy, and thereby inflicted a serious blow against the credit of the government, the achievement, according to the testimony of English newspaper correspondents, has made them so unpopular that they are not likely to profit much by it. There is a chorus of indignation against the weakness displayed by the Zanardelli ministry, which remained passive and inactive, although the socialists were declaring openly in their meetings that the czar, if he ventured to come to Rome, would encounter a hostile demonstration. Some of the Italian newspapers, while condemning the ministry, are complaining that the French socialists maintained fully as threatening an attitude as the Italian, but that the exar did not, on that account, hesitate to visit Paris. The answer to this, of course, is that the French government had exhibited the determination and the ability to keep its revolutionists in order. The refusal of the czar to visit him is understood to have been a bitter disappointment to the king of Italy, who has always been on terms of close personal intimacy with the Russian potentate, and has always been inclined to believe in socialistic

A great canal scheme for the English soon to be put into execution. The object Birmingham. A surveying party has been support of the Mersey Weaver Navigation trustees and that the canal will be an extension of their system. This runs from Weston Point, at the junction of the Manchester Ship canal and the Mersey estuary, to Winsford (Cheshire), and at present carries a large proportion of the sait, chemical and earthenware traffic of the country. It is proposed to extend the canal so as to admit of the passage of steamers of 200 tons to the Potteries, Wolverhampton and Birmingham. There is a small canal already existing, which only carries barges of from twenty-five to fifty tons, and china and the earthenware manufacturers are enthusiastically in favor of a waterway which would enable them to secure their china clays in larger bulk and export ware without trans-shipment and consequently at much less expense. The local chambers of mmerce are expected to furnish substantial aid to the enterprise.

There are symptoms in Denmark of an inclination to enter into more friendly re lations with Germany and it is even reported that King Christian has promised to visit Dresden to be present at the unveiling of a statue to Bismarck. The editor of the Danish ministerial organ, the Politiken, suggests that the economic situation of Denmark and the danger of a protectionist England, may account for this action on the part of the old king. Denmark, he says, could not support the crisis which would be the consequence of such a change would be the consequence of such a change in England. She must have new openings at any cost and she could find no better substitute for the English market than that of Germany. "The conquest of the Plaindealer."

Senor Salmeron, ex-president of the short-lived Spanish republic, has been talking with a newspaper correspondent in Madrid and declaring his conviction that the monarchy will soon disappear and be succeeded by a popular government. He declined, however, to explain his reasons for this confidence. The retirement of Senor Silvela from public life he described as an event of extraordinary political significance, and he commended his views of the situation as extremely statesmanlike. Spain, he said, was passing through one of the most serious crises in her constituttional history. The republicans had a higher duty to fulfill than the mere utterance of criticism upon the blunders of the liberals and the conservatives, which had brought about a permanent conflict between the royal authority and the will of the country. The government of Holland, after appointing a competent board of engineers to carefully estimate every item of cost, is considering a proposition to canalize utaries. The total capitalised expenditure for the principal and interest at 3 per cent from time to time by the rentals and sales greatest sea wall in the world, costing $23,-900,000, will be the initial structure, and the rest of the money will inclose the river and the harbor of Amsterdam with nearly 200 miles of dikes for the benefit of commerce and the drainage of all square miles of adjacent territory.

AN ENRAGED MONOPOLY.

Steel Trust Fumes and Threatens Dire Things. Minneapolis Times.

A decidedly refreshing bit of antimonopoly work was that done by Secretary Moody in awarding to the Midvale Steel company a contract for one-third of the 16,000 tons of armor plate needed for the new battleships. The Carnegie and Bethlehem companies, instead of gobbling the whole contract at their own price, secured awards for 5,000 tons each and waxed exceeding wroth. As a matter of fact the Midvale company was the lowest bidder and, if it had possessed facilities for coing the work, would have been lawfully entitled to the entire contract. It offered to give bond for the fulfillment of the contract, but there was some question of its ability to do the work on time and for this reason the award was divided.

There are two encouraging features in the transaction. One is the administration's defiance of the dictates of the steel trust's armor plate monopoly and the other the certainty that a new plant for the manufacture of that important material will be established. The government has been paying double prices to the trust and if the Midvale company succeeds in meeting requirements this extortion will cease.

This will renew agitation for the addition of an armor plate factory to the naval construction and repair equipment. It is entirely illogical that a rich and powerful Midlands is under consideration and likely government should remain at the mercy of a greedy trust and pay exorbitant prices of it is to connect Manchester and Liverpool | for its armor plate. If we are to have a with the Potteries, Wolverhampton and large navy the taxpayers will be robbed of many millions unless one of two things making an exhaustive examination of the shall occur-either the bringing of prices levels with a view to beginning digging to a reasonable level by the competition of operations in the course of a few months. the Midvale company or the manufacture

It is believed that the promoters have the of armor plate by the government itself. Meanwhile, the steel trust is theatening dire vengeance. It proposes to overthrow the Roosevelt administration in return for being balked in its extortion. If the people have anything to say about it the adminfstration will not be defeated on that account, whatever other causes for dissatisfaction there may be.
